*This didn’t win any awards but we had to respect the fight in that crawdad as well as the timing of the photo!"
Following a hotly contested competition and careful consideration by our judges panel we’re pleased to congratulate Mike Paananen as the repeat winner of our Grand Prize cover shot photo! The details, vibrant colors, depth of field, and unique artistic composition once again set Mike’s photo apart from the rest and earned him his place as “King of the Mountain”. And speaking of mountains, Mike had this to say about his winning shot taken from one of the newer additions to the Ridge to Rivers trail system - Around the Mountain Trail (ATM) - up at Bogus Basin:

“This photo was taken at one of our favorite summer resting spots. I am very fortunate that my riding buddies don’t mind my constant need for a muse. I generally shoot with a Samsung NX1000 4/3 camera with a 30mm pancake lens. If you haven’t experienced the Ridge to Rivers trail system at Bogus Basin, you are missing out.”

Once each year we devote an entire edition of Current to sharing the results of our photo contest and the outcome is stunning. We’d like to thank all participants for submitting their photos and we especially want to recognize the 1st place photographers in each of our contest categories:

- Megan Carley  Landscape/Scenic
- Keith Hyde  Human Interest
- Paul Dawson  Wildlife
- Jim Culpepper  Abstract/Close-up
- Daniel Gonzalez  Action

It’s easier than ever to punch a few buttons on your phone and blast a decent picture out into the world — and that’s a cool thing — but the awareness, skill, patience and timing required to capture a unique moment with a compelling photo is a different thing altogether. It’s refreshing to know there are still folks out there willing to explore, observe, photograph and share their inspiring and lasting images with us. Enjoy!

Corrals Trail (Ridge to Rivers)

Photographer’s statement:
This photo was taken while chasing my husband on a mountain bike one morning before work. He is rarely willing to stop for a photo so I get to practice my intervals as I snap a quick photo and sprint to catch up to him. We feel fortunate to live and recreate in such a beautiful place! I generally shoot with a Canon Rebel but on adventures such as these I use my trusty iPhone 6.

Photographer’s statement:
The American Kestrel nest box and banding programs at Lucky Peak Lake offer unique teachable moments each spring. Here, a young lady with the New Roots Program – a weeklong, summer camp that connects refugee kids with conservation education – assists park rangers with leg banding a nest box of chicks. This work is done in partnership with researchers at Boise State University. Our great parks and open spaces in Ada County serve a wide variety of uses and users, benefitting all Treasure Valley residents.

Photographer’s statement:

Living in southeast Boise, near the Boise River and the Greenbelt, I often bike or walk along the river for recreation and to observe birds and wildlife that may be present. On this occasion, Dec 1, 2015, I was walking along the river near the Eckert Street bridge and flushed a covey of California quail into the bushes along the river. One of the quails landed in a small tree and remained there while I was able to take a number of photographs of it at various settings on my Canon Powershot SX50 camera. I was fortunate to photograph the quail in excellent light in a nice natural environmental setting.

Photographer’s statement:

As a Boise Police Greenbelt Patrol Volunteer I get to cover over 25 miles of the greenbelt each time out. This has given me so many opportunities to photograph nature and human activities. I have been blessed by those opportunities to share these photographs with so many organizations that use them for educational purposes. This photograph is one taken along the Boise River where kayakers often test their skills. This is the first photo contest I’ve ever entered and am glad it was for Ada County Parks and Waterways.
